"The Rose Maiden" at Point Loma High School May 7-8

"The Rose Maiden," a cantata based on the poem by Francillon, will be presented May 7 and 8 in the Point Loma High school auditorium by the combined music departments of Point Loma High school.

This fantasy depicts the Queen of the Flower Fairies, weary of winter, seeking to roam the world in search of the "Rose of Love," which she is told, has sharp thorns as well as beauty. She has to assume mortal form and learns the bitterness of tears. Love comes when she meets a young and handsome forester, sung by Don Coker, 'ex 33, now at State college, one of Point Loma's most outstanding tenors. He was persuaded to sing the tenor role, in spite of taking a lead in the college operetta recently.

Soprano roles will be sung by Norma Palmer, Thelma Fox, lovely star of last year's "Rosamunde" production and Betty Daniels. Patty Stose, Barbara Richards and Marjorie Anderson have been selected to sing the alto parts. In addition to Don Coker, Gerald Lutes and Hugh Milligan will sing tenor parts. Bass roles are to be carried by Emery Bryans, and Jack Smith.

Myron Green, director of vocal music at Point Loma, assisted by Mrs. Madeleine Hoffmann who is accompanist and coach, needs no introduction to San Diego musical audiences.

In connection with the "Rose Maiden" production Edward Jan-owsky will present the Point Loma orchestra of 45 pieces in an unusual arrangement of the "Carmen Suite," especially prepared for this program.

Rounding out the program, a Punch and Judy puppet show under the direction of W. Emery Shepherd, drama coach, is expected to delight the comedy urge of the audience.

Both glee clubs comprising one hundred ten voices will augment the stars of this colorful fantasy.

"Science Marches On" was the title of a clever assembly presented by the junior high school science department at Point Loma.

A public address system constructed by Jeff Hall and Jack Hopkins in the school laboratory, brought the program clearly to all students.

Reflecting and refracting telescopes were compared. Students at Point Loma are constructing a six inch reflecting telescope, using a donated porthole glass for a lens. All shaping, chemical filing and polishing is being done by the students.

Topics covering a wide field in science were presented as follows: Quincy Wright, stars; Esther Batt, intolerance to Galileo; Phyllis Price, telescopes; Barbara Jean Anderson, reflectors; Benton Decker, aluminum; Gloria Miller, geneology of the Pekinese; Ann Wansley, cancer; Dorian Paskowitz, paleontology.

John Croff, master of ceremonies was assisted by Wilburn Dort.

Frank Tait and George W. Banks are the instructors under whose able direction the March of Science was given.

Margaret Johnson opened the program with a piano solo and played interlude music through out the assembly.

Danish exercises are the newest activity of the G.A.C.'s letter girls of the athletic department at Point Loma. Rhythm added to regular calesthenics are a feature of the Danish drills.

Twenty two girls participated in the drills at the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium. Hostesses for the meeting were: Marion Purdy, chairman; Marie Miller, Beatrice Diaz, Grace Gangitano and Alice Sigler.

The G.A.C.'s have been especially active this year, trying at each meeting to enter some new field of sport. Bowling, swimming, riding have claimed their attention.

Point Loma High school has produced more than a dozen winners in varied fields in the last few weeks. Scholarships, essay contest and radio skit winners and selection by the D. A. R. of an outstanding high school girl, are some of the honors which have come to students at Point Loma.

May Sakamoto, selected last year to receive the medal awarded to the outstanding student in the school, just won the city-wide essay contest on "Americanization." Amaroc post, who sponsored the contest, through its chairman, Mrs C. W. Garrison, states, that, "May's essay was considered exceptional among the fine entries submitted, and that her essay will be sent in to compete in the State Contest." If she wins, a prize of fifteen dollars will be awarded to May and a plaque commemorating her success will be presented to the school.

May Sakamoto is in A. Bess Clark's English class at Point Loma. In addition to writing extremely well, she is talented in music and accompanies at the piano most of the student productions.

Frank B. McElwee, a charter member of Ocean Beach Kiwanis, rejoined the club Wednesday after being a non-member for two years, resigning on account of business reasons which made it impossible for him to keep up his attendance.

Ed Wickern was chairman of the day's program with former Mayor Harry C. Clark as speaker for the day. Mrs. H. Hartvigsen sang two solos preceding the speaker. Mr. Clark had as subject, the Constitution, and told how British subjects in their home country had tried for three hundred years to form a government that was free and conducted by the mass of the people, but until the American Constitution was written no document of this nature had ever been drawn up by the people.

He said the supreme court of the U. S. is the only one of its kind in the world and as ever today stands for the rights of the individual. The supreme court, he said, was the balance wheel of the American government. He compared our American Constitution with the present regime of Germany, where he said, the individual had no right, no court to appeal to, that nothing but Hitler-approved news could be published, and there was no free speech whatsoever.

The speaker admonished all to be good citizens and take an interest in our government, in which there has been few actual changes, since the Constitution was adopted 150 years ago.

The newly appointed City attorney, Mr. Ault, was a guest of James H. McKinney, W. J. Gilmore of La Jolla was a visitor.

Illinois Primary Results Interesting and Significant—New Tax Bill Drafted—President Roosevelt Favors Flood Control Projects.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

ILLINOIS' primary held the center of political interest for it not only provided lively state battles but also was of considerable moment nationally.

Frank Knox

Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Senator Borah of Idaho, who was born in Illinois, were the contestants for the Republican Presidential preferential vote, and the former came out with 31 delegates against 26 for Borah. The senator's friends were elated because, without organization, he carried a large part of the state outside of Chicago. This preferential vote is purely advisory and neither man has a slate of delegates to the national convention. The result makes it certain that Knox will make a respectable showing on the first roll call. It also adds to Borah's prestige and aids him in the coming Ohio primary.

Gov. Henry Horner, seeking renomination, was victorious in the bitter fight with the regular Democratic organization and the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago, which had thrown him overboard and supported Bundesen for governor. The Democrats almost unanimously voted for the renomination of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and the Republicans named Former Senator Otis Glenn to oppose him in November.

Republican leaders in Washington were encouraged to believe the internecine warfare in the Democratic ranks would help the Republicans to carry the state. The Democratic sages, on the other hand, liked the showing of strength made by Borah, feeling his liberal following might switch to Roosevelt in November if the G. O. P. puts up a conservative candidate.

In Nebraska's primary only Borah's name was printed on the Republican preferential ballot but about one-sixth of the voters wrote in the name of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas.

For the Democratic preference President Roosevelt was unopposed in both Illinois and Nebraska.

President Roosevelt's supporters, the state Democratic executive committee of Georgia ordered a Presidential preferential primary on June 3 and fixed the entrance fee for each candidate at $10,000.

"The New Deal has plenty of money to pay for a primary in Georgia and I am in favor of letting them do it," said Will Mann, close personal and political friend of Gov. Eugene Talmadge, administration critic.

The governor was asked directly whether he would oppose President Roosevelt in the primary.

"I don't know," he answered. "I am pretty busy with state affairs right now. It depends on how things shape up in the state."

HAVING discarded the President's suggestion of temporary processing taxes, Chairman Sam B. Hill's house subcommittee completed its draft of the new tax bill.

Sam B. Hill

It calls for a new type of corporation levy, ranging from 1 per cent to 29.7 per cent for corporations with net income up to $10,000, and from 4 to 42½ per cent for corporations with net income over $10,000, depending on the amount of earnings that are not distributed. Preferential tax treatment is given to banks and insurance companies, to debt-ridden companies, to companies in receivership, and a new system of taxing non-resident aliens is created.

Railroads will continue to have the right to file consolidated returns but the committee refused to accept the petition of R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, that railroads as a segregated group of industry, be given a variety of special deductions in computing taxable net income.

WITH appropriate ceremony the cornerstone of the new Interior department building in Washington was laid, the President handling the trowel. The structure, the second largest government office building there, is to be completed in December. It covers five and one-half acres and will provide 700,000 square feet of usable floor space. It will cost $12,000,000, about $5,000,000 less than the capital's largest, the Commerce department building.

The trowel used by Mr. Roosevelt was the one employed by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol in 1793.

IN HIS press conference President Roosevelt said government departments are concentrating on flood control problems and that if congress would pass a bill appropriating a billion dollars for that purpose he would sign it, provided the measure put men to work immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt said the Passamaquoddy project in Maine and Florida ship canal were eliminated because of the recent refusal of congress to make appropriations for continuance of the work. He said he did not contemplate doling out relief funds for the projects and that there would be no funds for the projects unless congress reversed its refusal.

On the same day the United States Chamber of Commerce issued a warning against encroachment of the federal government on flood control projects which are the primary responsibility of the states.

The committee also objected to the New Deal policy of expending large sums for dams to develop hydro-electric power and declared that the administration should follow a well-balanced program having as its foremost purpose the control of floods.

BY A vote of 153 to 137 the house rejected a resolution to permit Senator Black's lobby committee to pay $10,000 to special counsel in injunction litigation started by William Randolph Hearst to protect his telegrams from the probers. This action, which followed a bitter debate, doesn't halt the work of the committee, which has its own funds, but it prevents the payment of more than $3,600 a year, in accordance with general law, to Crampton Harris of Birmingham, Ala., former law partner of Chairman Black.

The lobby committee in a recent session brought out the fact that some wealthy men who are backers of the American Liberty league also have contributed to the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, though what this has to do with lobbying was not quite clear. The Southern committee, which is headed by John Henry Kirby of Houston, Texas, is opposed to some of the New Deal doings.

SUDDEN death, due to a coronary thrombosis, came to James M. Beck at his residence in Washington, and all informed Americans mourn the demise of this public spirited citizen and eminent authority on constitutional law. Though he was a sturdy and consistent opponent of the present national administration, leading officials in Washington united with the Republicans in declaring that in his death the nation had sustained a great loss.

J. M. Beck

Mr. Beck was not only one of the foremost lawyers of America but for more than three decades was a public man of distinction, holding numerous offices at Washington, and an influential place in the counsels of the Republican party. Born in Philadelphia in 1861, he first held office as United States attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, as a Democrat. He left that party on the silver issue and was made an assistant attorney general by President McKinley. In 1921 Mr. Harding appointed him solicitor general, an office which he filled with distinction. He then served three terms in congress, where he was one of the best debaters, and retired in 1934.

Richard Yates, former governor of Illinois and former congressman, died in Springfield at the age of seventy-five years. The son of the Civil war governor of the state, Mr. Yates was for many years a picturesque figure in Illinois politics and an influential member of the Republican party.

MUSSOLINI'S armies in Ethiopia occupied Dessye, an important military base, and captured vast stores of war materials. Marshal Badoglio at once started an expeditionary force along the excellent road from there to Addis Ababa, and it was believed the capital city would be captured within a few days.

Stiffened by military successes in Africa, the Italian delegation went to Geneva for peace conversations, prepared to demand a peace on Italy's terms, including virtual Italian control of the entire empire of Haile Selassie. Settlement of the matter within the framework of the League of Nations seemed remote if not impossible.

PLANS for mutual defense in case Germany attacks France or Belgium were studied by the general staffs of Great Britain, France and Belgium at a meeting in London. High officers of the armies, navies and air forces were present, with experts to assist them.

It was understood that a major feature of the plan would be to reply to any German attack with a terrific aerial bombardment by massed fleets on German industrial centers, railways, army headquarters, airdromes and seaports.

It was clear that the relatively small British professional army could not give a great deal of help against German aggression, and that Britain's effective aid would be rendered by her navy, which could easily seize control of the North sea and the channel, and her steadily increasing air forces.

BEFORE the senate subcommittee on labor appeared spokesmen for organized labor with charges that there is a great movement of machine guns, tear gas and police clubs into industrial centers for use in contending with strikes and attendant disorders. The first witness to tell the story of the arming of industrial plants for conflicts with labor was J. P. Harris, a steel worker from Portsmouth, Ohio. In support of his assertions came a mass of data compiled by the senate munitions investigating committee and presented at the hearing by Heber Blankenhorn, an employee of the national labor relations board.

At one point Harris testified that he knew the Wheeling Steel corporation at Portsmouth was "arming," a statement that brought from corporation officials at Portsmouth an assertion that company police were armed to protect property against "thieves and firebugs, and they will continue to be armed."

At another point in the hearing there was testimony that general "rumors" were being circulated that the Ford Motor company was "shot through" with spies, hired to report on the activities of labor.

ABOUT six hundred men and women, members of the recently organized Unemployed Workers' Alliance, staged a big parade of "hunger marchers" in Washington, shouting demands, singing and waving banners. They sought to present a petition to President Roosevelt in the White House but the best they could do was to obtain an audience from Secretary Marvin McIntyre for a delegation headed by David Lasser, president of the alliance.

Vice Pres. Garner

Lasser declared after spending 30 minutes with the President's secretary: "Mr. McIntyre gave us a lot of nice words, but nothing substantial. If nothing is done to give these people jobs there will be a hunger march on Washington next summer in which hundreds of thousands will take part. We are tired of Mr. Roosevelt's promissory notes."

Lasser and his delegation also called on Vice President Garner at the Capitol and got even less satisfaction from him.

"The jobless feel that we have been sold out by the Democratic party," Lasser declared.

"I resent that," snapped the Vice President, reddening. "I have been in politics for 40 years and I don't think anybody has ever been sold out by the party."

FOLLOWING a conference with Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, who was recorps area for criticizing WPA methods, President Roosevelt took the soldier back into his good graces and appointed him to the command of the Sixth corps area with headquarters in Chicago. He will replace Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy and the assignment takes effect May 2. General McCoy is transferred to the Second corps area at New York to succeed Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, who is retiring.

PLUTARCO ELIAS CALLES, former president of Mexico and for long the most powerful figure in that republic, was forcibly exiled to the United States, together with three other once prominent citizens, by the Mexican government, which declared their presence there was dangerous to the welfare of the country.

Summarily ousted with Calles, who for 11 years ruled Mexico with an iron hand, were Luis Morones, former minister of labor and leader of the regional confederation of workers and peasants; Luis de Leon, former minister of the interior and agriculture; and Rafael Melchor Ortega, former governor of Guanajuato.

The four men were, by order of President Cardenas, placed aboard a plane at Mexico City and taken across the border to Brownsville, Texas. From there they took another plane to California.

Leftists charged that Calles and his associates were fomenting agitation against the Cardenas administration. This Calles denied, adding: "A state of anarchy exists in Mexico and communism is spreading with government help."

SOMETHING new in Spanish history took place in Madrid. The parliament, by a vote of 238 to 5, ousted Niceto Alcala Zamora from the office of president of the republic. This action, accomplished by a coalition of Socialists, Communists, Left Republicans and ten minor groups, was taken on a Socialist motion that the president had acted illegally in dissolving the last parliament before the elections and that therefore he should be expelled from office. Back of this motion, however lay radical sentiment that Zamora, in using his power according to personal whim, has hampered the progress of the "republican revolution."

Diego Martinez Barrio, speaker of parliament, was made temporary president to serve until elections are held.

IN THEIR formal acceptances of the invitations of the United States government to the forthcoming inter-American peace conference, three of the Latin American nations have proposed that a league of American nations be formed to preserve peace in the western hemisphere. The suggestion comes from Presidents Alfonso Lopez of Colombia, Jorge Ubico of Guatemala and Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic.

Hats to Match Top Juvenile Coats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GRANTED that mother and big sister are looking too chic and charming for words this spring, in their new spic and span stylish tailleurs or their bolero costumes, if not a redingote outfit that contrasts print with plain, to which there has been added accessories utterly feminine and seductive as accessories must be that would go high-style this season.

However, we are not saying that voguishly attired adults are the whole show, not when a bevy of stylishly arrayed youngsters join the procession. Then does competition become keen and it is the tiny tots in their new spring outfits that will be getting the big applause, we venture to say, be their elders ever so beguilingly garbed. Which they should for children's fashions are as cunning and intriguing as fancy dare picture this season.

As a fashion "first" for spring it is the little coat-and-hat ensemble that [illegible] moment. It adds zest to the mode that children's coats are unusually versatile this season in the matter of styling. Then, too, a particularly wide choice of materials is offered. Tweeds in delectable colorings, camel's hair weaves, navy twills, novelty wool plaids and serge are all-important in the list of juvenile coatings.

Close attention is being paid to tailoring and styling, with the English trend dominating. Inverted pleats, crisp collars, velvet pipings as well as insets in tailored collars are high style details to consider. Most important to remember is that fashion decrees that every wee coat or suit is to be companioned by a matching hat.

While grown-ups are going in for daring color to the limit, high colors are not so much in the children's wear picture. As a matter of fact, it is the medium tones that are most generally in use this season. Pastels are also definitely favored in aqua, dusty and skipper blue in the order named. Many all-white coats will be worn.

Full length coats are more popular than the short jackets, although the ever beloved reefer type jacket of navy flannel continues to hold its own. The trio of models pictured were selected for illustration from among a collection of little folk's fashions displayed at a preview style event recently held at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago.

The clever little coat to the left is one of the new and very much admired Princess Elizabeth types. It carries that convincing air of distinction such as every fashion-alert mother covets for her child. Tweed in the popular dusty rose shade fashions it. Cunningly flared lines, the double breast button fastening, and the deftly tailored details of collar, cuffs and pockets are all significant style items. The collar of natural linen is detachable.

The little girl walking hand-in-hand so chummily with her companion has on a very attractive long reefer coat in navy blue. White metal buttons and a white hand-embroidered lingerie collar add chic finishing touches. The perky matching hat is of cloth identical with that of the coat.

The adorable child in the foreground has on a coat of skipper blue novelty weave wool with the Princess Elizabeth lines given to it such as are regarded as exceedingly smart for the younger set this spring. Her matching Scotch cap repeats the trim of blue plaid silk used on the coat.

MULTI-DUTY GARB URGED FOR SPRING

There's a lot of talk these days about the "basic wardrobe," which is a good idea for the spring budgeteer.

The idea is to select the spring suit, coat and printed frocks in one color theme, to be worn with interchangeable accessories. Suppose, for instance, you start with one of the smart new man-tailored suits with black jacket and striped skirt. With it, if you shop wisely, you will get an extra skirt to match the jacket.

Then you should choose a topcoat in tailored style, also black, which may be worn over the suit or with a printed silk frock.

Your printed silks should be bright, gay and simply made, so that you may wear various frilly lingerie accents with them, changing their mood with the jabot or collar you select. With these for a foundation, you may achieve endless variety by choice of contrasting accessories.

Parasols and Fans Give Frivolous Touch to Garb

Parasols add a frivolous touch to many summer outfits. In bright printed cottons they appear with beach costumes and in polka-dotted silks they accompany summer suits. Some of them have long crook handles.

Folding fans made of field flowers, tulle or organdy and flat oval lacquer fans, only a little larger than a hand, lend a glamorous air to evening costumes.

New Gloves

Don't put on the gloves for the first time when in a hurry. Even if you do get them on without splitting they will never fit so well as when they are carefully put on, stretching the kid gently to conform with the lines of the hands. If this is done the first time, all other times will be easy.

WITH A VEIL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A bit of straw, a brim of closely stitched net, a full-blown rose and a fragile, frivolous, flattering veil and presto! The milliner evolves as seductive a little cocktail hat as the world e'er gazed upon. As here pictured this intriguing headpiece is posed by Helen Chandler who wears it in her newest play. It carries a highly important style message in the tight brim that frames the head, namely, the use of many layers of net closely stitched. Milliners are making many wide-brimmed hats as well as turbans and toques of stitched net this season.

Bowknot Motif

You can tie yourself in knots, fashionably speaking, this spring. Chanel sponsors the bowknot, and the new jewelry proves just how smart they look on a costume. Hinge bracelets carved in a bow have bright metal knots for contrast. The clip pairs carry out the same motif in little half bows with the same metal knots. They come in bright green, red, blue, white and black.

Uncommon Sense

Don't worry about your mistakes. Just be careful not to make many of the same kind.

Spilt Milk

You are bound to fail sometimes. Everybody does.

Forget your failures—but don't repeat them.

Before you tackle a job look it over from every possible angle.

Think over all the ways that it can be done, then decide in your mind which is the best.

Stick to that till you put it over.

As for other men's faults, don't pay any attention to them.

You will have plenty to occupy your mind making sure that you are on the right road.

Mr. Omar Khayyam had the right idea when he admonished his companion against past regrets and future fears.

Neither regrets nor fears will help you any.

Lay out a job before you start it.

Get all possible information concerning it before you begin.

Don't be ashamed to ask for help if you need it.

When you're "all set" and you are as sure that you're in the right get your ideas together and make your beginning.

Then there will be no necessity of going back and doing it over.

"I never learned what happened to the man who sang "I don't know where I'm going, but I'm on my way." I don't need to learn. It is a certainty that he "flopped."

The mariner who started on a voyage without a chart or a compass would soon be running up the S O S flag pretty soon, if he didn't sink before he had time to lay a hand on the signal halyard.

* * *

In the old days "Jerry builders" used to put up houses "by gosh and by guess" but the first gale that came along scattered them all over the landscape.

Time was when cities "just growed" like Topsy.

Now they are scientifically planned, but a lot of houses had to be torn down to find a place to put them.

That kind of "spilt milk" cost a lot of money that might and should have been used to better advantage.

If the frog, one of the most unintelligent of creatures, has the wit to look before he leaps, surely you, who have the gift of mind, ought to be able to do a little thinking before you tackle any difficult undertaking.

Take a good long careful look at every problem which confronts you, set it down on paper, check it up for mistakes, and then proceed to solve it.

That will save you many mistakes. And mistakes are likely to run into important money.

* * *

Before the days of bridges, man was a "home body."

Bridge Builders

It required a miracle to enable the Children of Israel to attain their Promised Land.

But soon they found a way to cross seas and rivers. Later bridges, and ships, which are a kind of bridge, opened lines of travel.

Today, we have airplanes which bridge the air, as well as vast structures which bear up railroad trains and provide swift and safe travel through formerly impassable areas.

Working today in the field and in laboratories are thousands of bridge builders who are opening new means of communications.

These are the men and women who are of the first importance in the present time.

Today the people of the world would find it impossible to get along without them.

* * *

I have lately made, in a single day, a motor journey of more than three hundred miles, over streams and rivers, and through dense forests.

I traveled over many bridges, some of which were built years ago, some of them great, new steel structures which required years in the building.

All of them were erected to meet the needs of people who want to "go places" and who are always in a hurry to get there.

And while these over-head bridges were in process of construction many cities were building under-ground bridges, tunnels which enabled people to make in a few minutes journeys which but a few years ago required hours of slow travel.

* * *

Trained minds are employed in the unremitted effort to check avarice and greed, to increase the yield of field and orchard, and so solve many of the problems which stand in the way of progress.

It is up to every one to join in this building campaign. Ours is a good world, but it must be made a better one.

If we all help to smooth the path to betterment, to set up bridges wherever barriers stand in the way, there will be more and better schools, fewer jails and great contentment.

Incidentally we will get far more fun out of life when we know that we are helpers and not obstructionists and by our efforts, puny as they be, are part and parcel of a great movement to establish a real and a permanent civilization.

TALL TALES

As Told to:

FRANK E. HAGAN and
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Champion of the Oil Fields

ASK any Texas or Oklahoma oil-driller who's the best in his business and he's pretty certain to answer "Why, Kemp Morgan, of course!"

Ask him why and he will tell you it's because Kemp had more unusual experiences than any other seeker after "black gold" ever did.

For instance there was the time Kemp lost his best drill. He was working in soft ground but he noticed that the drill kept going slower and slower the farther it went down. Pretty soon it stopped completely. When Kemp tried to pull it out, it was stuck fast. Come to find out that he had hit an alum mine and the hole had shrunk up around the drill so tight that even Kemp couldn't budge it.

Then there was the time a Texas "norther" swooped down on Kemp's rig. But it didn't stop him—no sirree! He just kept on drilling, and brought in a 22-inch gusher. It was so cold that the oil froze as it spurted upward so there was a solid column of frigid oil. Kemp just took out his knife, hacked it off in three-foot lengths and shipped it to the refinery on flat cars.

That was in Texas but Kemp had a funny experience once in Oklahoma. He drilled a well so deep that it tapped a rubber mine 'way down in Brazil. She began to gush pure rubber, so Kemp just blew his hot breath on it to make it solid, cut it off in 11-foot lengths and shipped it to that place in Ohio where they make solid tires for trucks.

When the average driller brings in a "duster," he moves his rig away from there pronto. But not Kemp Morgan! He knew what a tough time the Kansas farmers had digging postholes in the summer when the ground was baked hard. So whenever he'd strike a dry hole, he'd just take his two hands, pull it up four feet and two inches at a time and saw it off. Then he'd ship a carload of these lengths across the state line where they always found a market.

Private Life of Jonah

IT WASN'T a whale which swallowed Jonah, theorizes Stanley Suchwalko, it was a big-mouthed fish in northern Michigan. His friend, Laddie Hornik, captured the monster in 1930.

Laddie inspected the fish, which had laid down its life while being hooked, gaffed and beaten over the head with a pair of oars, and couldn't decide what to do with it. The size seemed to destroy the fish's commercial value and imagine Laddie's surprise, says Stanley, when the first stranger to arrive bid a fabulous price for the fish's scales.

Laddie yelled "Sold!" Then he recovered his poise, sheared off the scales, counted the money and watched the stranger bear the scales away.

"What'll you do with 'em?" asked Laddie.

"I'm a spade manufacturer from Moline, Ill.," replied the buyer. "I've got material here for 6,400 spades of the best chilled steel."

Buyer after buyer paid staggering prices for different parts of the fish and Laddie, says Stanley, didn't get wise until a tremendous price was bid and accepted for the fish's stomach.

The stomach buyer immediately slit open the fish's belly and revealed the golden throne upon which Jonah had been seated during his long captivity.

"It's cheap at half the price," stated the buyer with pardonable satisfaction as he brushed a stray fin from his precious purchase.

The Despondent Grasshoppers

A SEASONED maxim of the copybooks is that frequently a real cry does a person good. Leonard Bailer, once a Nebraska farmer, is sure of it.

Rain washed away the railroads around his Nebraska lands; the drouth hit him squarely; then the dust storms killed every living thing and his land was dry as the inside of a grain bin. At this moment, the grasshoppers arrived by millions and settled on his farms.

Wasn't a thing for the 'hoppers to eat but they were too tired to move on and Leonard almost lost hope. As a last gesture, however he rushed out among the despondent grasshoppers, sitting there in the dust, and planted several sets of the strongest and hardiest onions he could buy.

To his surprise the onions matured quickly. The moment their bulbs appeared above ground the grasshoppers pounced on them, ate ravenously and burst into tears.

"And that," Leonard recalls proudly, "is how my farms were saved. The land was drenched by the tears of the grasshoppers and as soon as they had drowned themselves I was able, of course, to raise a normal crop."

Theory Pre-Dates Pasteur

The germ theory of disease is much older than the discoveries of Louis Pasteur, with whose name it is associated because he was the first to make practical use of it, according to the Medical society of the state of New York. He produced serums for anthrax, rabies and other diseases. But before Pasteur was born, a Seventeenth century German scholar named Athanasius Kircher noted that flies visit the sick and infect the well by contaminating their food.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT DISCOVERS LOVE

WONDERFULLY handsome was Lightfoot the Deer as he stood in the little opening by the pond of Paddy the Beaver, his head thrown back proudly as he received the congratulations of his neighbors of the Green Forest who had seen him win the great fight with the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. To beautiful Miss Daintyfoot, peeping out from a thicket where she had hidden to watch the great fight, Lightfoot was the most wonderful person in all the Great World. She adored him, which means that she loved him just as much as it was possible for her to love.

But Lightfoot didn't know this. In fact he didn't know that Miss Daintyfoot was there. His one thought had been to drive out of the Green Forest the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. He had been jealous of that big stranger, though he hadn't known that he was jealous. The real cause of his anger and desire to fight had been the fear that the big stranger would find Miss Daintyfoot and take her away. Of course this was nothing but jealousy.

Now that the great fight was over and he knew that the big stranger was hurrying back to the Great Mountain, all Lightfoot's anger melted away. In its place was a great longing, a longing to find Miss Daintyfoot. His great eyes became once more soft and beautiful. In them was a look of wistfulness. Lightfoot walked down to the edge of the water and drank, for he was very, very thirsty. Then he turned, intending to once more take up his search for beautiful Miss Daintyfoot.

When he turned he faced the thicket in which Miss Daintyfoot was hiding. His keen eyes caught a little movement of the branches. A beautiful head was slowly thrust out and Lightfoot gazed into a pair of soft eyes which he was sure were the most beautiful eyes in all the Great World.

He wondered if she would disappear and run away as she had the last time he saw her. He took a step or two forward. The beautiful head was withdrawn. Lightfoot's heart sank; then he bounded forward into the thicket. He more than half expected to find no one there, but when he entered that thicket he received the most wonderful surprise in all his life.

There stood Miss Daintyfoot, timid, bashful, but with a look in her eyes which Lightfoot could not mistake. In that instant Lightfoot understood the meaning of that longing which had kept him hunting for her, and of the rage which had filled him when he had discovered the presence of the big stranger from the Great Mountain. It was love. Lightfoot knew that he loved Miss Daintyfoot, and looking into her soft gentle eyes, he knew that Miss Daintyfoot loved him.

THE VANISHING KNOT

AN ORDINARY piece of string is the only object that you require for the mystery of the vanishing knot. You start by tying a single knot in the string; but do not draw the knot tight.

Then, to keep the knot where it belongs, you tie the ends of the string in several tight knots that would require a few minutes to untangle.

Everyone sees the single knot between the two loops. All know that it is impossible to remove that lone knot without untying the ends of the cord. Yet you have only to turn your back for three seconds and the knot is gone!

There is a simple secret to this mystery. When you turn your back, draw the single knot to the top, so it joins the tight knots at the ends of the string. Two loops have become one; and the string may be examined.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

VARIED RECIPES

THIS is the time of the year to enjoy a good cake. The following will be one worth keeping on hand:

Orange Cream Cake.

Cream one-third of a cupful of fat with one cupful of sugar, add two beaten eggs, a pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of grated orange rind and one-half cupful of orange juice with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, added alternately with two cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder well sifted. Pour into two layer pans and bake 20 minutes. Cool and add:

Orange Filling.

Blend one-third of a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of flour, a pinch of salt together. Add one-half cupful of orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of grated orange rind, a tablespoonful of grated lemon rind, one egg yolk and one tablespoonful of butter. Cook together in a double boiler, stirring often. Cool and spread on one of the layers. Cover the other layer and spread over it a frosting.

Creamed Cheese on Toast.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add six tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. When well blended add three cupfuls of milk and cook until a creamy sauce is made. Add two-thirds of a cupful of good cheese, stir until melted, then add a slice of finely chopped onion—or a little scraped onion is better—two eggs well beaten and two chopped pimientos. Cook just long enough to set the egg. Serve poured over hot toast.

Creamed Oysters.

Melt one-third of a cupful of butter and add one-half cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Mix well and add two and one-half cupfuls of milk, cook slowly, stirring constantly until thick and creamy. Heat a cupful and a half of oysters in their own liquor, add to the sauce and pour over toast or crackers or serve in patty shells.

AS ONE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONE GOD—for when a God we need
It matters little what our creed
Or what the litany we read.

One race—when care has made us kin
It little matters what our skin,
What matters is the man within.

One land—when men must legislate,
Protect the poor, inspire the great,
The thing that matters is the state.

One world—when men must lay the stone
Of new foundations, then our own
We cannot lay for us alone.

One hope—as certain as the sun,
For all we dream of shall be done
If all we do we do as one.

PUBLIC SCHOOL WEEK

The last days of April and today were observed as Public School Week. This is not only educational nobleness, but is is important in fact it is an imperative gesture which cannot be ignored as a civic acknowledgement. For 15 years California has been loyal to its duty and in all these years it has appealed to the parents and the public to improve the opportunity for celebrating Public School Week. One essential principle, that people are urged to visit the schools and acquire first-hand knowledge of how they are being conducted. Acquaintance with the teachers is also a great benefit and help in a mutual way. It also serves for a better co-operation with parent, teacher and child; thus aiding in perfecting a larger and better educational system.

In focusing our attention on the child we must never forget that the first function of education is the formation of character. Parents should be concerned over the moral surroundings of their children in the school room as well as the play ground. This week will be well worth while both to home and school if it serves to concentrate on this prime requisite in public education.

Today in United States there are 23,000 high schools, administered and taught by 250,000 superintendents, principals and teachers, are training some six million boys and girls in good citizenship, orderly behavior and life instruction. While the public schools as a whole grew from 15,000,000 pupils in 1900 to 25,000,000 in 1928, an increase grew 77 per cent from 1920 to 1928 alone!

The high school today gives a more advanced course than did the college or university fifty years ago; and it is taking new territory into its curriculum annually. This is equally complimentary to the grammar school.

Education is the great life purpose. Nothing civilizes or elevates the intelligence of the human race like education. Indeed, it is worthy in all human attributes, morally, mentally and physically. Education inspires all the good traits of a person, with a determined persistence to advance and acquire. The world has plenty of educated derelects, who lack both determination and persistence; but this is no fault of education. Education and ambition to succeed are a good guiding force that will translate your air-castles into real towers of accomplished greatness. It is the one pathway leading out of darkness into the clear and brilliance of day.

Righ now is "orange blossom time" in California, and this state outrivals anything of the kind in all the whole world! Perhaps the average Californian overlooks this rare spectacle of significance, feeling that it is just commonplace in occurance. True, you can find orange blossoms every month in the year in this state, but May 1st is the charm of the year. Just now there is nothing that compares with a blooming orange grove, and the Southland with over 100,000 acres of groves is unique and delightful for its sigh and appeal to the senses. Trees golden with fruit and snowy with blossoms at the same time! This year is no exception, but always these white pedals sweeten the air with a remarkable redolence rich and soothingly sweet. Week ends just now bring thousands of motorists from the cities to enjoy a day among blossom-lands. What a pity that this profusion of beauty and fragrance should haste its sweetness on the California air!

While we are on the subject of education. it is appropriate to mention that Horace Mann, that loveable dean of education, has a birthday on May 4th. What he did for education in America generations ago, will endure in the gallery of fame. No greater honor was ever given to a public school building than the name of "Horace Mann School." These school buildings are scattered all over the United States! He was born in Franklin, Mass., in 1796 and died in 1859; his contribution to education made him one of our foremost educators. He gave up a lucrative law practice in Boston to become secretary of the Massachusetts board of education. Thru his influence the development of the free public-school system as it exists today was accomplished. His last work as a public servant was to become president of Antioch college, which he accepted after refusing nomination as governor of his state.

The CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) has finished its third year. According to a detailed report, since April 5, 1933, this organization has made "things count." It has planted 558,000,000 trees, built 1,963,500 soil erosin control dams and cut 69,000 miles of trails and minor roads thru forests. It has cost $1,204,560,000, including $33,325,000 for the purchase of forest lands. This great civic project has employed during the three years over 1,600,000 persons. Counting the number of people benefitted and the great accomplishments gained by its beneficial results, this is a big factor in relieving the unemployed and rendering a lasting service to the Federal Government. Maryland forests alone, with its appropriation, it is claimed, has accomplished more than it could have done in 25 years by itself.

Automobile owners pay nine different Federal taxes on their car! And they scarcely realize it. Manufacturers of cars and accessories and handlers of gasoline and oil, for the most part, seem to pass the taxes on to the individual car owner. In addition to these burdens the car owner, of course, has to pay State gasoline taxes as well. The State taxes for gasoline in 1935 were $636,000,000. The average car owner pays annually about $30 in taxes, most of which are hidden. This may be a tax secret to many. It might be true that this increasing tax is coming from governmental spending, largely through extravagance. Increasing government expenditures mean new and bigger tax connections; you can not take it any other way.

Democrats who wish to make certain the vote they cast the May 5 primary will be reflected in the action taken by the convention in Philadelphia on June 23 should cast their vote for the group of candidates selected and endorsed by President Roosevelt as his representatives. This group is shown in the column to the left.

A vote for the delegates preferring Roosevelt is an endorsement of his policies and principles. As he will be the only serious candidate before the convention, his nomination is assured on the first ballot.

A vote for either of the other two groups of delegates preferring other candidates who are not real contenders can only be a vote of protest against President Roosevelt and the Democratic administration and will give our Republican opponents added ammunition in their futile attacks.

Ocean Beach Grammar School News

NATURE DAY

This afternoon the annual Nature Day is being celebrated at Ocean Beach school. Three features are: exhibits of science work participated in by each class, the pet show, and the flower show. The pet show is to be held on the school grounds and flower show in the school auditorium. Student committees are handling all arrangements for both shows. Field marshals and stall managers for the pet show consist of the members of the L6, H6 class from Miss Figgins' room. A representative from each class from the fourth grade to the high sixth grade composes the student committee for the flower show plans. Schedule of events for Friday afternoon at the school are as follows: 12:30 to 1:30, arrangement of animals by classes and placement of signs over stalls; 1:30 to 2:30, exhibition of pets and flowers and judging for prizes and awards; 2:45, pet parade thru court and around field led by large animals closing with taking pets home. Local organizations are courteously providing the school with judges for the shows.

Ardus Ewing will represent the Veterans of Foreign Wars post 2415 and past commander Conklin of the American Legion as judges of the pet show. Two members of the Kiwanis club will also be judges. Mrs. Florence Cobb of the Eastern Star and judges from the American Legion and Women's club will make the awards in the flower show.

COMMUNITY NIGHT

Organizations sponsoring the Public Schools Week program filled the auditorium with interested patrons of the school. The music provided by the Point Loma Glee clubs under the direction of Myron B. Green and the elementary school orchestra numbers under the direction of William Gay were enjoyed. The topic "What Would You Have Us Teach?", gave Lee L. Bloomenshine, principal of Woodrow Wilson Junior High school, an opportunity to interpret the program of the junior high school. Representatives from local organizations who sat on the stage as sponsors of the program were Edgar F. Hastings, chairman of the County Board of Supervisors; Mrs. Gladys Nelson of the Eastern Star; LeRoy Lee from the Masonic lodge; Mrs. Esther Wisdom, president of the PTA Logan Ruggles, commander of the American Legion; George Bryans, president of the Young Men's North Shore Political club; Mrs. LeRoy Lee president of the Ocean Beach Woman's Club; Capt. BUILT JAPANESE VILLAGE

Boys and girls of the H3 grade in Miss Barnes' room have been studying about the homes of the Japanese people. They have built a Japanese village showing the types of homes found in the country and the cities. Many interesting stories have been written about Japan and pictures have been drawn to illustrate the stories. The room is decorated with Japanese lanterns, cherry blossoms, and wistaria which the children have made.

Class members presented a dramatization of the Japanese story, "Two Promises", to parents and students Thursday afternoon as part of the Public Schools Week program. Children who took part in the play were: Father, Jim Bartlett; the two sons were Kenneth Hart and Jim Ripka; Suke San was played by Darleen Frieze; Hanako, Nancy Hopkins; mother, Arlene Kearns; lotus blossom, Maryolive Cobb; maid, Charlene Rocco; and the friends were Alice Pearl Hall and Jacqueline Marshall.

"The AWAKENING Of SPRING"

Mrs. Confer's H2 graders took part in the Thursday afternoon assembly at the school auditorium when they presented a story dramatization, "The Awakening of Spring". Norma Castanien played the part of the rabbit, George Taylor was the squirrel; Muriel Mellon, the fox; Richard Wiley, the Beaver; and George Ahlgren was the bear. The snow fairies were Betty Pearce, Corinne Fontaine, Georgia Lee Pollard, and Priscilla Welsh. Spring fairies were played by Rosemary Bilk, Thelma Rowe, Irene Kimball and Miriam Heard.

Mission Beach continues to build more homes and there is no doubt but that 1936 will be the banner year of its history to date. 'THE FULFILLMENT OF DREAMS'

Rarely does it fall to the lot of humanity, to have their dreams realized, eulogized, or immortalized in his life, but such was the case in the "Kunz Memorial Services" given Sunday last, at the dedication of the new Immanuel Lutheran chapel which she made possible, at Ocean Beach.

Years ago, it was my happy privlege to have dear Mrs. Kunz and her beloved daughter who was living at that time, as close neighbors.

Out of that grew a friendship which has lasted these many, many years only to be terminated with her recent passing away.

After the death of lovely Matilda, she devoted all her time, life and energies to her friends and church.

Never was there a more earnest, zealous worker than she, often going out of her way to bring children into the Sunday school, and even persuading and interesting the older ones like myself, in a spiritual life.

Blessed indeed has been her work which was not unfruitful, for I too, joined with the Lutheran faith solely through her untiring and loving efforts in my behalf.

What a pity her life an example could not remain with us; but I feel sure it has left its enduring memories never to be forgotten.

Betty Jordan.

A tribute.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

This verse from Isaiah: "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked," is the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Everlasting Punishment" on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Lesson-Sermon includes these words of Jesus, from the Gospel of Luke: "Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. . . . And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

Among the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is the statement: "We should examine ourselves and learn what is the affection and purpose of the heart, for in this way only can we learn what we honestly are."

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"Reincarnation" will be the first of the May lectures under the general title "H. P. Blavatsky and her Teachings," to be given at Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, next Sunday at 3 p. m., by Abbott Clark and Mrs. Inez Davenport. The month's public activities are devoted to the presentation of the fundamental teachings of the Founder of the Theosophical society, as this month commemorates her passing, which was on May 8, 1891. Reincarnation means the reinfleshing of any entity and is therefore the particular instance of the general doctrine of reimbodiment, under whose law all things in the universe fall, from minute atom to immeasurable star-cluster. The speakers will confine their instruction more particularly to the manner in which man reincarnates.

O. HENRY'S story about the effort it cost a young man to grant his bride's request for a peach, reminds us that brides are fickle—but also, if we are peach-lovers, we have a feeling that the peach was worth the effort.

Remember the story?

"The bride sat in the rocker with her feet resting upon the world," O. Henry tells us. "She was wrapt in rosy dreams and a kimono of the same hue" . . .

" 'Precious,' she said, with an air of Cleopatra asking Antony for Rome done up in tissue paper and delivered at residence, 'I think I would like a peach.'

"Kid McGarry arose and put on his coat and hat. . . . 'Alright. . . . I'll step down and cop one for you—see?' "

The story continues with Kid McGarry's calling out the police force to raid Denver Dick's luxurious gambling house in order that he might procure one last, lone out-of-season peach which the place afforded, and incidentally emerging with a bruise that looked as if he had fallen off the Flatiron Building twice. And then:

"The bride waited in the rosy glow of the pink lamp shade. . . . And now he stood by her chair and laid the peach in her hand.

" 'Naughty boy!' she said, fondly. 'Did I say a peach? I think I would rather have had an orange'."

The story might have the ill effect of reminding other brides how good peaches are when they are out-of-season, if it were not for the fact that brides of today know how good canned peaches are. They also know a variety of ways to use them. Here are a few garnered from a bride's scrapbook:

Peach and Raisin Pie: Turn one cup of canned sliced peaches and one-fourth cup of raisins into a sauce pan, add one tablespoon sugar and one-half tablespoon flour mixed. Then add one teaspoon lemon juice, and simmer for five minutes. Line a pie tin, one-half the usual size, with plain pastry. Pour in the peach mixture, dot with butter and cross the top with narrow, twisted strips of pastry. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for twenty-five to thirty minutes. This serves four persons.

Peach and Cottage Cheese Salad: Arrange the required number of individual lettuce nests on a large salad plate. In each nest place a well-chilled canned peach half with the cut side up. Pile cottage cheese lightly in the center of each peach and garnish with Maraschino cherries and mayonnaise.

Peach and Apricot Filling (for cream puffs or cakes): Whip one cup cream and add six tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Add one-half cup canned peaches, one-half cup canned apricots which have been cut in fine pieces and well-drained, and one-half cup halved candied cherries. Use as a filling.

Peach Roll: Make a baking-powder biscuit dough out of one and one-half cups flour sifted with three teaspoons baking-powder and one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons shortening and three-fourths cup milk. Roll into an oblong shape. Drain peaches from a No. 2½ can well, and place in the center, reserving two peach halves for the sauce. Roll up the dough, pinching the ends and sides carefully. Steam one hour and serve with the following

Sauce: To the peach syrup from the No. 2½ can of peaches, add the two peach halves pressed through a sieve. Then add one tablespoon sugar which has been mixed with one teaspoon flour. Cook until somewhat thickened. Flavor and use over the roll. This serves six persons.

Business Upturn

Each week a small red-headed lad delivers a magazine to office workers in various downtown buildings.

Recently, the boy appeared, but without his magazine. The man reached in his pocket for his money, and then, noting the absence of the magazines, asked where they were.

The boy turned and called to a lad even smaller than "Red-Head."

"My brother," Red-Head said. "He's helping me today. Business is so good that I need a helper; you know, some one to carry the magazines and watch the money."

The Motorist's Daughter

A little girl was crossing the Atlantic with her mother. It was her first ocean trip. The sea was as smooth as the proverbial millpond for the first three days, then the ship began rolling and pitching heavily.

The child could not understand what had happened. "Mamma," she cried "What's the matter? Are we on a detour?"

Taxis Replace Old Gharries as Vehicles in Holy City

The last of Jerusalem's famous fleet of ramshackle open horse drawn cabs has been relegated to the junk heap.

In their place modern taxicabs will convey the citizens of Jerusalem and visitors up and down the precipitous slopes of the Holy City.

Practically every visitor to Jerusalem used to take at least one drive in one of these horse cabs, or "gharries." They seemed as typically a part of the Jerusalem scene as gondolas in Venice or rickshas in Shanghai.

Unfortunately for the cab drivers, however, the steep city streets recently were asphalted for the benefit of automobile traffic. As a result the cab horses continually slipped and fell. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals intervened and made representations to the government resulting in the withdrawal of horse drawn cabs from the streets.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

"He said—it may not be true, but he said they were always tattooed beneath the left breast. . . . In your case, I think, an expert was brought from Japan. It was thought, very properly, if I may say so, that so exquisite a canvas deserved a master's brush. . . . May we . . . see his handiwork, please?"

Helena sat as though stricken—turned into stone.

Pharaoh proceeded mercilessly.

"If you would like assistance, you've only to say the word. We're none of us lady's maids, but Rush has the reputation of being a lady's man."

The sweat was running on my temples.

As I tried to measure my distance, I found that I could not see, for my eyes had been fixed on Helena and now could not pierce the darkness which veiled the rest of the room.

And then I heard Rush moving. . . .

Had the fellow moved forward, that must have been the end of this tale. But he only passed behind me, to stand between me and Dewdrop—I suppose to be nearer his master . . . the suddenly favoured courtier approaching the steps of the throne.

That the end was fast approaching was very plain. Any moment now I should have to send my mask flying. First Pharaoh. . . . I would strike down the torch and hurl myself at the monster before he had time to think. First Pharaoh, and then his fellows. But for the thought of his fellows, I could not have stood my ground. But if I should not survive Pharaoh. . . . My heart that had been smoking seemed suddenly cold. Rush had the reputation of being a lady's man.

Helena was trembling. A little hand went up to cover her eyes.

"I'll make you an offer. I nearly made it just now. If you'll go now, I'll show you the secret way. Tomorrow night I'll meet you with five thousand pounds in gold. And after that I'll pay you five thousand a year—for every year that you let Mr. Spencer live."

It was clear that a child was speaking, a terrified child. Offer, promise, figures were things grotesque. Her suggestion was below comment. But Pharaoh had his foot in the opening, quick as a flash.

"That's better," he said. "Much better. You've gone, shall we say, a long way. But I'm sure Mr. Spencer's worth ten thousand a year."

The man was playing with her—playing the fish he had hooked.

Helena's voice was shaking.

"I've no right to give any more. The money's not mine. That's more than I ought to take for my personal use."

It was awful to hear such naivete issue from Helena's lips.

"I am not concerned with your right. To insure Mr. Spencer's life will cost you ten thousand down and ten thousand a year."

Her palms clapped fast to her eyes, Helena threw back her head.

"All right," she said, "I'll pay it."

The words seemed torn from her throat.

"One thing more," said Pharaoh. "It will not be convenient to meet you tomorrow night. I take the first premium now. Show me that cellar, or strip. I don't care which you do, for I guess you can open it naked as well as clothed."

I think a full minute went by before Helena moved.

Then very slowly she rose and turned to the right. Then her hand went up to a sconce, laid hold of the bracket and pulled it down.

I heard no sound, but a panel below the sconce moved, and, when she turned, I saw the shape of a door which was standing ajar.

So Helena severed one of the threads by which her life was hanging.

Slowly she returned to the bench.

As she took her seat, Pharaoh rapped out an order.

"Put a light on the lady, Bugle."

I think my heart stood still: but I had a torch and the wit to do as he said.

"Rush and Bugle stand fast: Dewdrop with me."

He crossed to the gaping panel, with Dewdrop directly behind him, lighting his steps.

As he pulled open the door, I saw the stonework beyond.

I stood waiting for their footfalls to fade. My moment had come.

Rush was speaking and wagging his dreadful head.

"Sheba's the goods," he murmured. "Look at that mouth. Here. I'm goin' to 'ave a close-up. Gimme that—torch."

Between us we bungled the business, and the torch fell down and went out. I let him grope and find it. As he stood up, grunting, I took him fast by the throat and drove my knife into his heart.

He gave one frightful convulsion. And then I knew he was dead. . . .

I got to my knees and sought for the torch. When I had found it, I switched it on to the bench. This was empty.

I turned the beam on to myself.

"Helena," I said, "it's all right. I've done the swine in."

She did not answer, so I got to my feet and threw the beam round the room. She must be there somewhere.

And then all at once I knew where Helena was.

She had fled for the staircase-turret when Rush and I, between us, had dropped the torch.

Rush had locked the door of the hall, not the door of the secret room.

I took a step towards this—and stopped in my tracks.

The doorway by which I had entered had disappeared.

* * * * * * * *

Helena was safe—for the moment. So much I saw. (As a matter of fact, she was saved: but at that time I did not know that no one within the room could open the door she had shut.) And Rush was dead, and Pharaoh and Dewdrop knew nothing of what had occurred. In the twinkling of an eye my position had been reversed. If I could not make an end of the two, I deserved to be shot.

I stepped to the cut through which Pharaoh and Dewdrop had passed.

As I had supposed, this gave to a winding stair—no doubt of a considerable depth, for though I strained my ears, I could hear nothing at all.

Determined to leave nothing to chance, I proceeded to lay my ambush with infinite care.

Pharaoh must find nothing wrong—until too late. To all appearance the room must be as he had left it.

The bench, however, could be seen from the head of the winding stair. I must therefore suggest to Pharoah that his captive had merely moved. This was easy enough. Next to the bench stood the fireplace, which jutted into the room. On the other side of this was a chair with its back to the wall. If my torch were trained upon this, Pharaoh would receive the impression that his captive had changed her seat, for the chair was masked by the fireplace and could not be seen from the cut. The only question was how to support the torch.

For a moment I stood thinking. Then I perceived that, unless I were to flout Reason, this office must devolve upon Rush.

Anyone leaving the stair with a torch in his hand would be almost sure to illumine the opposite side of the room. The corpse must therefore be moved, in any event. And if I could gird it into the semblance of life. . . .

In two or three minutes the grisly business was done, and Rush was seated upright in a high-backed chair, with an arm along one of the chair's and the torch in his hand. His belt and mine and some cord I had found in his pocket had done the trick. His head had proved troublesome, but I took a stick from the grate, buttoned this into his waistcoat and propped it like that.

The effect was hideous, for the corpse was poking its head. But that was beside the point. At the first blush, not even the man's own mother would ever have known he was dead.

Here I should say that, before I had set Rush up, I had taken away his pistol and Helena's master key.

Once again I took care to listen at the head of the winding steps—and heard no sound.

To pick my own position was easy enough. I had only to take my stand behind the panel-door that belonged to the cut. This was wide enough to conceal me.

I decided to use a pistol, for the bullet was swift and sure and at quarters so close I could not possibly miss. For all that, I took the knife too.

And then at last I was ready, with the knife at my hip and a pistol in either hand. . . .

Looking back, I find it strange that I, who ten days before had never, that I can remember, so much as knocked a man down, should have made these dreadful preparations without a qualm. That I had already done murder troubled me very much less than the loss of my belt. Indeed, my only concern was lest by some improvidence on my part the butchery which I purposed should not be fulfilled. It might be said that I was but making ready to save my life; but I cannot plead that excuse, for that consideration never once entered my head. But that was not of valour. I think the plain truth is that I was possessed.

What I had witnessed in that chamber had fired within me a furnace of roaring hate. I was going to kill Pharaoh and Dewdrop exactly as I had killed Rush—not because I had set out to do it, not because that was the reason why I was there, but because they had ravished Virtue—broken a lovely spirit, by abusing its lovely flesh.

I had to wait full five minutes before I heard a sigh on the winding stair.

The sigh grew into a murmur, and the murmur into that unmistakable sound—the regular scuffing of feet that are mounting a flight of stone steps. The footfalls were hasty. The two were mounting apace.

Why this was I could not imagine. Why should they run? The stars were fighting against them. But for their haste, I should not have heard them so soon.

The rapid, regular shuffle began to grow clear. . . .

Unless they were moving as one, the shoes of one of the two were rubber-soled, for only one set of footfalls came to my ears.

In this case—

And then I saw the glow of a torch.

Two steps more, and I heard their heavy breathing. . . .

The stars against them? All the company of heaven had ranged itself on my side. The two would be spent and breathless. . . .

Dewdrop began to speak before he had entered the room.

"Bugle an' Ruth to go down. Pharaoh thayth—"

As he stepped through the cut and I fired, I saw my mistake.

Dewdrop would lisp no more, but the deafening roar of my pistol had carried a message to Pharaoh which not even a child could misread.

I could have done myself violence.

It was not as if I had not been warned: I had been told as plainly as any fool could have been told that Dewdrop alone was mounting the winding stair. I had only to pocket my pistol and to take my knife. Torch in hand, out of breath, my victim could have made no resistance. . . .

As it was, by using my pistol, I had thrown away the most valuable weapon I had—the element of surprise.

It was true that, had I stabbed Dewdrop, Pharaoh would still have waited in vain for Bugle and Rush. But though he would have been angry and would at last have come up to see for himself the reason for their delay, he would never have dreamed of danger. But now he was warned.

Pharaoh was more than warned.

My shot, being fired when it was, had reported the ugly news that Dewdrop was dead. The fact that no one came down would confirm this report. And no one could have killed Dewdrop, unless he had first made an end of Bugle and Rush.

The truth was in Pharaoh's hands. He knew as well as did I that someone was in the chamber, waiting to take his life.

As I say, I could have done myself violence. I was here to play the knave, and instead I was playing the fool.

I am bound to confess that I cannot defend my annoyance at finding that I must fight Pharaoh instead of playing the butcher as I had already done. I can only say that at that time I had no fear for myself: but since I knew very well that the man was as swift and as cunning as I was slow, I was full of apprehension lest he should escape. The bare thought of such an outcome made the sweat start on my brow. Live—after what he had done? Live—to walk out of that room and do it again?

Somebody laughed—a very unpleasant laugh.

I think it was the devil within me—the sheriff that had been sent to fetch Pharaoh's soul.

I pulled myself together, slid my pistols into my pockets and set about hoisting Dewdrop out of my way.

CHAPTER XI

Helena

Now by firing, as I had, upon Dewdrop, I had cast away the element of surprise: but that was not all the mischief that I had done, for the roar of the heavy pistol had made me completely deaf.

When I had fired in the forest, so savage was the report that four or five minutes went by before my full hearing came back: but here, within four such walls, the shock of the violent explosion had appalled the drums of my ears.

To listen for Pharaoh's coming was, therefore, but waste of time, and, since he might arrive any moment, I made my preparations as swiftly as ever I could.

These were simple—there was not much I could do.

The chair on which Rush was seated I slewed to the left, so that the beam of his torch fell full on the cut in the wall. I then took Dewdrop's torch and studied the room, marking the furniture well in case I must move in the dark. Then I slid the torch into my pocket and lay down behind the great table of which I have spoken before.

This was a pedestal table of carved, gray oak. Between the two pedestals there was a knee-hole or archway three feet wide by some twenty-six inches high. Looking through this, I directly commanded the cut, while the pedestal offered good cover on either hand.

I ventured to settle myself with the greatest care, for I knew that if I possibly could I must kill my man before he had entered the room: if Pharaoh could contrive to come in, the advantage I presently held would be utterly lost, for, though we should, in a sense, be fighting on even terms, Pharaoh was an expert at murder, but I was no more than a resolute amateur.

I do not know how long I waited, but the first intimation I had of Pharaoh's approach was the sudden roar of his pistol as he fired at and shattered the torch.

And then—silence.

We were both of us deafened, of course; and, remembering that, I at least had the sense to move.

Pharaoh was trying to find me, stealing this way and that. He had only to brush against me, touch me with the tips of his fingers, and I should be—caught.

At once I set out to find him, with my left hand stretched before me and my pistol all ready.

I truly believe that my action saved my life, for Pharaoh passed me in the darkness and came upon Rush. I know this was so, for he fired upon the body, supposing it to be me, and the flame that leaped from his pistol gave me a mark to aim at, instead of lighting my face.

Farm Jurors Don't Know Hay Baler; Judge Asks Picture

Attorney Paul O. Cooper, representing a client in Fairmont, Minn., suing for damages allegedly suffered in a collision between an automobile and a hay baler, thought the jury of 12 farmers knew about hay balers. But they told Judge J. E. Haycraft they had never seen one, although much hay is raised hereabouts. Then it developed Attorney Cooper couldn't describe one either, so Judge Haycraft told him to bring a picture.

Why the Cow Jumped

A native of East London, South Africa, brewed some beer. His employer keeps a cow. The beer was left in an accessible place, and the cow, in passing, sampled it—about three gallons of it. Normally she is a quiet and well-behaved cow. But now she ran around in circles, tried to jump over the moon, and cleared a five-foot fence. And the native has been fined for owning beer.

TAXPAYERS ASSOCIATION SAYS COUNTY TAX MORE

San Diego county property owners were taxed 16 cents more per $100 of assessed valuation than they would have had to pay had the county levied the same amount of taxes for 1935-36 as it levied for 1934-35, according to a study of the effect of the changes in the tax system of California on county tax levies, recently completed by California Taxpayers' association.

The general county tax rate for 1934-35 was $1.85, L. D. Gifford, director of research of the Taxpayers' association, stated. Although the value of property in the county on which taxes can be levied was increased by 37.97 per cent, going from $149,176,025 in 1934-35 to $205,798,290 in 1935-36, the general county tax rate was set at $1.50 a reduction of but 35 cents. Had the county levied the same amount of taxes in 1935-36 as it did in 1934-35, the rate could have been $1.34 instead of $1.50 the association found. The general county tax levy was increased by 11.3 per cent.

The confusion brought on by the changes in the tax system, T. G. LaBlanc secretary of the San Diego division of the Taxpayers' association, stated, has been used in many cases to hide unwarranted additions to the amounts local governments are spending. Last year only seven California counties, Marin, Mendocino, San Joaquin, San Obispo, Santa Cruz, Sierra, and Sutter, passed along to their taxpayers the relief due them from the changes in the tax system.

Getting a Job and Getting Ahead

Advertising What You Have To Sell

A YOUNG man living in one of the smaller cities recently decided to insert an advertisement in the daily newspaper in an effort to obtain a position. Some of his friends told him he was crazy. Jobs were scarce as hen's teeth. Employers weren't going to bother to write or telephone prospective employees, even if they had a job open.

Within a week the young man had his job, and some of those who had prophesied failure most loudly were wondering why they hadn't thought of the same thing. It's doubtful, though, if they realized the real secret of his success, for he had used his ad to sell himself and his services just exactly as a manufacturer of grocery products or automobiles uses advertising to sell his products.

Before the young man wrote his ad he sat down and studied his product—which in this case was himself—and what he could do. Instead of thinking of what a job would mean to him he thought of what he might mean to the man who employed him. Then he used his ad to tell the prospective employer what he had to offer as an employee, and why he would be an asset to the business.

In looking for a job no advice is more important than to put yourself in the place of an employer. His first thought is, "What can you do? What have you got to sell me for the price I can pay you?" Answer those questions in a fashion which will convince the employer that he is getting a bargain and there is every chance that the job will be yours.

SOMEONE ELSE PROBABLY has just what your are wanting. And the same goes vice versa, in the want ads.
